State Printing Costs $3,000.
One Third of Voters
Will See It.

Special To The World
OKLAHOMA CITY, July 1.—(U.S. News & World Report)—The state patriarchs here today are preparing to furnish the state-wide male and pamphlets on the state questions to be submitted at the August primaries, and probably not more than one-third of the voters will ever see those pamphlets and know what

The reason is that the names of the voters have not been furnished the secretary of state by the county executives as required by law. The minutes of the voters have been received from nineteen counties, and documents to these have been sent out to the secretary. Notwithstanding that July has 31 days the secretary of state said today that he would send pamphlets out to six counties where the data are received on August 1. But after that it will be too late for the secretary to get the data in the hands of the voters at least thirty days before the election.

There are several truck loads of documents waiting to be sent out, but they can't be sent out until the address is in the secretary's, and it is hardly possible that many can be sent in one day's time. It would be six months to address more than two counties. If he did, the secretary had received a few from each county in which the response was directed to give the names of the voters and

He sent these to the secretary of state. He did them this way. Then the secretary saw the state election Board want a letter to the county registers explaining that the board would advise through the present registers as to the names. Then the county registers felt that the name was not supplied and as a consequence at least more than two-thirds of the voters of the state will not receive these pamphlets so the law says they should have the law, according to the decision of the court if they don't get them it will not invalidate the election of the measures. But the voters will have a vague idea of what they are voting on. The counties that have had a similar case are—Cass, Cherokee, Chouteau, DeWitt, Lincoln, Cleveland, Kingfisher, Noble, Grant, Harmon, Searlesburg, Wagoner, Nowata, LeFlore, Bryan, Oklahoma, Craig and Garvin.

rapid rate and it soon had the effect of making him very sick. Doubtless this was what the brave desired, as he would have been unable to go into the fight had he been able to do so. The medicine man is returned to the Greenleaf mountain, near Likages, being one of the well-known ranges of hills which traverse the country south of old Fort Oglethorpe.

After some days the Cherokee party drew near to the Osage and a battle seemed imminent. In this emergency the medicine man was called upon to assist in determining his fate in the battle. The medicine man used a small and transparent piece of white stone, and it is said that he held it in his hand and turned his finger nail, if the warrior for whom he conjured was to be slain a small blood-red streak appeared upon the surface of the stone, otherwise it remained clear.

Chief Felt Dead.

The Choerokees struck the Osages near the site of the present city of Muskogee, but the latter kept fighting back until the Claremore Mounds, near Claremore, Okla., Rogers country, were reached. Here the warriors of the Osages decided to make a stand and soon the battle raged fiercely. Hour after hour it continued, but the Choerokees made progress and after a while the Osages began to be re-arranged. The Osage war chief fell dead from a wound in a vital part and soon all the Osages were in full retreat toward the west. This battle, fought in 1700, broke the power of the Osages and they molested the Choerokee settlers no more.

There is a tradition to this day that the ghosts of the fallen warriors often are seen in the night. When the moon is full they move up and down the slopes and across the face of the great mound, which for miles away is visible in the prairies of Rogers country. The Choerokees and the Choerokee spear and tomahawk have been found on this old Indian battlefield.

City and County Officers at Bartlesville Find Hands Full With Crooks.

BARTLESVILLE, July 1.—City and county officers face a big task in ridding Bartlesville and Dewey of a gang of crooks who have been attracted here because of the roundup.
